Course Description

The purpose of this course is to train the student on the architecture, configuration and use of Active Roles.

Active Roles simplifies and secures Active Directory management by supporting enforced role-based security, automated group management, and user account creation / de-provisioning. Through Active Roles, companies achieve practical User/Group lifecycle management for their Windows enterprise.

Prerequisite

This course is designed for candidates that have System Center Configuration Manager 2012, Windows Server, security, and networking experience in an enterprise environment. Candidates should also have basic Microsoft SQL Server and Windows PowerShell knowledge, mobile device management, and application configuration experience. These candidates may be the System Center Configuration Manager Administrator, Active Directory Administrator, Exchange Administrator, Windows Server Administrator, or Enterprise Desktop Administrator for their organizations.
